
PreventX 24/7™ Disclaimer

NewEraSOS August 2020

PreventX 24/7™ is an EPA registered antimicrobial (EPA Reg. No. 91116-1) that imparts durable biostatic activity to surfaces allowing for surface protection against different microorganisms including odor causing bacteria, mold, mildew, and algae.

A disinfectants' EPA approved label will list many specific organisms that it has been tested against to protect the public. PreventX 24/7™ will not be on any CDC list for protection against SARS-CoV-2 because it is not a disinfectant. Furthermore, it makes no claim for public protection only that of surfaces.

PreventX 24/7™ label by law is required not to list specific organisms. As a result, over the last 25 years, customers have asked for independent lab testing on various microorganisms for proofing. These include gram positive and negative bacteria along with enveloped and non-enveloped viruses. The EPA is clear that these studies can not be used to persuade the public that an antimicrobial is approved to claim efficacy against viruses. Antimicrobials are only approved by the EPA to claim effectiveness against odor causing bacteria, mold, mildew and algae as a static agent.

Everyone must continue abiding with CDC recommendations and disinfecting protocols. PreventX 24/7™ should never play a part in replacing disinfecting. However, if you want to take a crucial step to protect surfaces in-between disinfecting then we have a cost-effective and safe solution. Question is “What are you doing in-between disinfecting to protect your surfaces”?

We understand professionals are often unfamiliar with bacteriostatic claims and apologize for any unintended perceptions. To be clear, the choice is not whether to use PreventX 24/7™ as part of a disinfecting protocol. The choice is to spend a few extra pennies a month (per square foot) to provide added antimicrobial protection to all your surfaces and touch points so that your surfaces are protected in between cleanings.

A New Era of Scientific Solutions for Your Peace of Mind